'Terrorist Targets' Struck

Israeli Planes Again Raid Lebanon

TEL AVIV. MRy 17 (UPI).-Israeli planes carried out a second day of strikes into Lebanon today in retaliation for the Maalot massacre, the military command said, and a raiding party went a mile into Lebanon last night and attacked an Arab-guerrilla post. The command said its bombers struck at "terrorist targets" in southern and southeastern Lebanon for a half-hour today. All the planes were said to have returned safely.

The strikes began after noon, several hours after Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, in Israel attempting to bring about disengagement with Syrian forces on the Golde Heights, amicred res-terday's air raids and loss of life.

The Lebanese government announced that a woman from the village of Kfier was killed during teday's raids. No casualty estimates were available from the Is-military command said the salient captured by Israel in the October war and Mount Hermon battled with Syrian artillery and tank units. Two Israeli soldiers were wounded, the command said.

Jet Claimed Downed

In Damascus, Syrian military communiques reported combat along the entire Golan line, and said that Syrian jet fighters intercepted Israeli planes bombing southern Lebanon. The communiqués claimed that an Israeli plane was shot down and was seen to crash in the direction of Israeli-occupied territory.

An Israeli Army spokesman denied the Damascus reports of dogfights between Syrian and Isracii planes and the downing of an Israeli plane. "There was no contact, there was no battle and there was no downing," he said. It was the 67th straight day of conflict in the war of attrition between Syria and Israel. Lest night, an unspecified number of Israeli troops went into Lebanon and blew up a building used by guerrillas, a mile inside the frontier, opposite the farming community of Dan

Military sources said the raiders were after a group of guerrillas that apparently slipped away just in time, But an announcement said: "A search of the building prior to its detonation showed the presence of terrorists." The raiding party returned unchallenged to Israel, the announcement said.

The previous reported ground strike into Lebanon occurred on April 12, in retaliation for a guer-rilla suicide raid that left 18 Israelis dead at Kiryat Shemona. In the latest official Lebanese casualty count in yesterday's raids, 48 persons were reported killed, 174 wounded and 20 missing, perhaps buried under debris, The announcement said that 134 homes were wrecked, 10 were damaged and a number of small huts and shacks destroyed by fire. The campaign against southern Lebanon followed the assertion by the Israeli chief of staff, Lt. Gen. Mordechai Gur, that the Palestinian terrorists who attacked Maslot came from Lebanese territory. He said he could not rule out the possibility that Israel would try to make southern Lebanon "unlivable"—a word used two months ago by Defense Minister Moshe Dayan,

"The only way we can deal with them [the guerrillas] is to make it quite clear they will be killed," Gen. Dayan said.

On Wednesday, the three Palestinian guerrillas held 35 students for almost 14 hours in the Maslot schoolhouse. When the Israelis stormed the schoolhouse. 30 persons were killed, including

Today, the Lebanese government accused Israel of carrying out a "premeditated massacre" in yesterday's air attacks on Palestinian refugee camps and Lebanese communities.

Maalot Residents Protest JERUSALEM, May 17 (Reuters).—About 50 residents of Maalot demonstrated outside the day, demanding tighter security for the town.

Several women screamed histerically, "Death to the guerrillas" and "Prison for guerrillas is a guest house," during the twohour demonstration.

A delegation of Maalot residents later met Knesset speaker Yisrael Yeshayahu to request the tighter security measures.

Kissinger Takes Initiative, Gives Own Ideas to Israelis

JERUSALEM, May 17 (AP).-Secretary of State Henry Kissinger presented undisclosed "American ideas" on disengagement to Israeli leaders today in an uphill effort to end the fighting on the Golan Heights.

The open acknowledgement by a U.S. spokesman that Mr. Kissinger had taken the initiative was clear indication that he would try to bridge the gap with Syria before winding up his Middle East peace mission.

No mention was made of the reported Israeli request to suspend Mr. Kissinger's efforts, which the state radio had said were "dead-

Instability Seen If Left Wins

French Fear Election Aftermath

By Jonathan C. Randal

PARIS, May 17 (WP).-French voters are fearful that Sunday's close presidential rupoff election ma; inaugurate a period of political instability.

These fears are rooted in the ambiguous nature of the constitution of the Fifth Republic which provides for a half- presidential, half-parliamentary rezime.

As long as Gen. Charles de Gaulle and his successor, the late Georges Pompidou, were in the Elysée Palace, they could count on docile prime ministers and obedient parliamentary majorities. The regime became increasingly presidential, even monarchical, in character,

But a potential constitutional crisis is in the offing if François Mitterrand wins because his backers—Socialists, Communists and opposition Centrists—are a good 70 seats shy of the 246 constituting the absolute majority needed to rule.

Mr. Mitterrand has said he would appoint a fellow Socialist as premier. And the Communists have softened their demands to the point that they are willing to settle for a third of the portfolios, specifically excluding the Defense, Interior, Foreign and Finance Ministries, Mr. Mitterrand has suggested that the present Gaullist-dominated parliamentary majority should not overthrow such a government immediately, but instead accept legislation fighting inflation and tacking on a kind of bill of rights to the constitution. He has encouraged such thinking by hinting that there is no rush in pushing controversial nationalization legislation.

Such reasoning is dictated by the belief that the Gaullists-who alone control 181 of the 490 National Assembly seats—and Valery Giscard d'Estaing's 55 Independent Republicans would swallow such harmless legislation rather than risk their seats by dissolving parliament. The present assembly has four years of its normal five years still to run and many of the outgoing government's parliamentary backers stand to lose in any groundswell on the left implicit in a victory for Mr. Mitterrand. But Mr. Mitterrand knows that the present electoral law-another De Gaulle legacy-makes in extremely difficult for the left to win a parliamentary majority. For unlike the presidential race in which every vote has the same weight, the legislative elections favor conservative, rural candidates thanks to gerrymandering designed to bunch up votes of the left in a limited number of voting districts. Moreover, voting for Mr. Mit-terrand means ousting not just the Gaullists, but also Mr. Giscard d'Estaing who has been an increasingly powerful figure for 11 of the last 14 years.

And the French electorate is quite capable of withholding the landslide vote the left needs to govern for fear of installing the Communists in government. Although Mr. Mitterrand has

He could either face the problem implicit in destroying his hardbuilt alliance with the Communists in favor of teking his Socialists into a center or center-right coalition. Despite the fighting tone of his speech, the evening was something of a social gathering for the privileged, judging from the young girls in expensive,

acientific" methods. Pique Not Enough

He knew, however, that more than pique and legal action were needed to reverse the swing. Along with his campaign managers, he decided on three main lines of action and by mid-week they had seemingly paid off. Mr. Mitterrand had caught up in the poll yester-day in Le Figaro (a L'Aurore poll today still showed Mr. Giscard d'Estaing ahead, 51-49). Mr. Mitterrand's tactics this week consisted of a "new" televi-sion style, stepped-up invective before mass audiences and, at grass-roots level, an effort to get out the vote by thousands of local politicians and supporters. Some of Mr. Mitterrand's supporters had wept after the disappointing first-round results. This week, there was guarded optimism that the new tactics could just make the difference.

The advice for TV came from a veteran newscaster, Maurice Seveno, who looks after the "technical" side of presentation and the onetime revolutionary, Regis Debray, who advises on the political content and what is called sensibilité.

'Ideally Shy'

- For one TV appearance, Mr. Mitterrand chose to appear with a well-known writer (a clever move in France) and with his wife. Danielle, who got good reviews in the provinces. A Bordeaux daily called her "ideally shy." And he engaged in low-key but frank dialogue with another veteran newscaster. Joseph Pasteur, whose popularity was boosted by his stand for a freer state-

When Mr. Mitterrand admitted that he had "raised the tone" of the campaign, he meant his style on the road. He used constantly the litary form of public rally to whip his supporters, from Marsellies to Nancy, into a frenzy where he had them shouting "We have won, we have won."

But it will be perhaps the third tactic which will prove most effective. The machines of the Socialist and Communist parties have been turned on full. Three thousand political meetings have been organized in eight days.

against French habits, so campaign workers have stepped up the number of meetings in factories, marketplaces and cafes.

The bulk of the voters they seek are Gaullists. Mr. Mitterrand himself has spent up to five hours a day preparing and delivering his 'patriotic' TV addresses. Campaign staff members proudly chalk up each Resistance hero who switches sides.

Even Mr. Schmidt's call for an American "political presence in Europe" some who heard it-was not new. Mr. Brandt used the same phrase in a policy declaration on Jan.

Still, the overall context of Mr. Schmidt's remarks, coupled with his past pro-American stance. left the impression that he will emerge as America's chief advocate within the Common Market.

Turning to the other main element of West Germany's foreign policy. Mr. Schmidt paid the obligatory tribute to Mr. Brandt's Ostpolitik of seeking a rap-prochement with the Communist bloc. Saying that it "was right conclude treatles with our Eastern neighbors," he promised to continue Bonn's active participation in East-West détente

However, he served notice that his government intends to ach the East with greater caution and seek assurances that détente is not a one-way street with all the benefits flowing to the Communists.

In respect to one Communist country - East Germany - his words were blunt and laced with bitterness. This was because Mr. Brandt's resignation was trigger-ed by the revelation that one of his close personal aides was actually an East German spy.

"In the spirit of the policy of detente and in the interest of all Germans, we have concluded treaties with East Germany." Mr. Schmidt said. "These treaties do not just consist of letters. Both contracting partners must also observe the spirit of the treatics

"The grave spy case which has deeply upset people in East and West these days is not in keeping with that spirit," he said.

Regarding the domestic aspects of his policy statement. Mr. Schmidt put his emphasis on pragmatic goals, indicating that his government's main concerns will be arresting inflation, guaranteeing continued full employment and safeguarding West Germany's position as the biggest trading country in Europe.

Mr. Kissinger had intended to go directly to Cairo from Damascus late tomorrow. He intended to talk to President Anwar Sadat and then head for home by way of Bonn and London, arriving in Washington Sunday night. A senior TIS official had said Mr. Kissinger would be unable to work out a full disengagement agreement between Israel and Syria this weekend. He apparently planned to step away from the area for several weeks, leaving aides behind to keep negotiations going. The return here tomortow night apparently sets back Mr.

l'issinger's timetable. Spokesman Robert Anderson declined to specify the proposals Mr. Kissinger had made to the Israeli team, All he would say was that "There were some American ideas discussed on the question of disengagement between

Syrian and Israeli forces." More Than Mediator

Until now, Mr. Kissinger's role was represented as that of a mediator, trying to find common ground between Syrian and Israeli positions. He was known to be advising each side what the other would not accept, but otherwise leaving it to the parties to take the initiative.

The senior official said Mr. Kissinger was now "a little freer" with his own ideas since the gap has narrowed considerably.

Justice Sir John May, sitting in Birmingham, granted the bail to Mr. Milhenen, who was ordered to appear in court on July 3 at Wolverhampton, where he lives. Mr. Milhench, who was ordered to report to the police daily, had been in jail for almost a month.

One of the charges against Mr. Milhench alleges that he tried to obtain £25,000 from a national newspaper group by criminal deception in connection with a land deal involving the prime minister's staff and a forgery of Mr. Wilson's signature.

Cost Increase Proof Under present regulations, refiners who want to increase prices are allowed to do so only have increased.

In a 38-page document explaining its proposed regulations, the agency said that, if the "transfer price" at which an international oil company sells to its U.S. affiliate is accepted to determine price increases, then it pays the international company to raise its prices. The profits of the international company rise, and its domestic affiliate is not hurt because the agency allows the increased purchase price to be passed on to the consumer, the agency said.

Price Comparison One way to check whether the practice had occurred was to compare the price a particular international company charges its U.S. customers with the prices it simultaneously charges customers elsewhere in the world, the agency said. A sample explanatory chart prepared by the agency showed prices ranging from $7.52 a barrel to $9 a barrel with no special relation between the price and the quantity purchased-The agency also said costs should be computed "by use of the customary accounting procedures generally accepted and consistently" applied by the firm concerned.

A Donald Nixon Friendship Figures in Trial

LOS ANGELES, May 17 (NYT).

—Robert Maheu, former manager of the Howard Hughes holdings in Las Vegas, told a federal court jury yesterday that he had received a White House request to break up a friendship between a man who worked for him and Donald Nixon, the President's brother.

"We had been requested by the White House to break up the romance between [John] Meier and Don Nixon," Mr. Maheu testified, while giving evidence in support of his claim for $17.3 million in defamation damages against Mr. Hughes's holding company, Summa Corp. Mr. Maheu said that the two men had been traveling together, with Mr. Meier identifying himself as a close associate of Mr. Hughes and Mr. Nixon letting it be known he was a brother of the President.

Sensitive Point

Earlier Mr. Maheu told in detail of his assignment in 1960 from Mr. Hughes to prevent the publication of details of Mr. Hughes's loan of $205,000 to Donald Nixon. Mr. Maheu did not go so far in his testimony yesterday as he went in his depositions before the trial. Then he said that it was Charles (Bebe) Reboso who had told Richard Danner, a Hughes employee, that Donald Nixon and Mr. Meier should be kept apart. It was Mr. Danner who carried $100,000 in $100 bills to Mr. Rebozo from Mr. Hughes, a matter which has been under investigation by various federal agencies for more than a vear. Mr. Maheu said that it was Mr. Meier's refusal to follow orders that he stay away from Donald Nixon that caused Mr. Maheu to demand Mr. Meier's resignation in September, 1969.

Mr. Meier had worked on the payroll of Robert A. Maheu Associates, the witness said, in order to separate him from the Hughes company during a period when Mr. Meier was supposed to be working with anti-war and anti-weapons-testing groups. Mr. Hughes opposed nuclear weapons testing in the Nevada testing range and used Mr. Meier as well as Mr. Mahen and others employed by him-to further this opposition. Mr. Maheu said that Mr. Hughes felt that since his corporation had contracts he could ill afford to be exposed as using anti-war and anti-weapons groups to support his anti-nuclear-testing campaign. In 1968, Mr. Maheu testified, he found that Mr. Meier had been talking to others of his closeness to Mr. Hughes, contrary to their arrangement.

Mr. Maheu wanted to dismiss Mr. Meier, he testified, and show-ed a memorandum to him from Mr. Hughes which was dated March 16, 1968, which said, in part: "I urge you not to fire Meier until we discuss him further"

In 1960, after the White House request was made through Mr. Rebozo that Mr. Meler and Donald Nixon be kept apart, Mr. Maheu testified, he assigned one

At the time of the meeting, and for months afterward, it was the stated position of Mr. Nixon, his staff and the Committee for the Re-Election of the President that the Watercate break-in was in no way authorized by White House or high campaign officials-and that they had no knowledge of the burglars' activities.

In arguing that the tape recording should not be turned over to the Watergate prosecution force, the President's lawvers contended that there was nothing in the tape "concerning possible criminal conduct or disrussions of possible conduct."

Ruling by Sirica However, U.S. District Judge John Sirica ruled Dec. 19 that about five minutes of conversa-tion on the tape of a 75-minute meeting were relevant to the grand jury's investigation and ordered that portion of the recording turned over to the special prosecutor's office. It is believed that the live-

Pan Am Says Dutch Illegally Pay Fare Rebates to Youths

By Robert Lindsey

NEW YORK May 17 (NYT). -Pan American World Airways filed a protest with the Civil Aeronautics Board yesterday, charging the Dutch national tourist office and KLLS, the Dutcharrhine, with illegally attempting to circumvent a U.S. ban on low-cost youth fares to Europe,

The tourist agency has offered 850 to passengers aged 16 incough 23 who fly to Amsterdam after June 1 if they will answer a questionnaire recording their opinions on various subjects, Pan Am contended that such payments constituted a "rebate" prohibited by federal law and urged prompt CAB action to forbid the payments. At least one other European airline-Belgium's Sobena Airw. rs—said it studying the possibility or offering a similar rebate to young trai ciera.

On another front in a developing international controversy over transationtic youth fares, travel agents here reported extensive confusion over a method being used by some young people to fly cheapiy to Europe. They are buying youth-fare tickets to Europe that are nominally issued from Canada with an intermediate stop in New York, but using only the New York-to-Europe part of the tickets. Sen. Gurney Wins Dismissal of Fla. Campaign Count

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 17 (AP).—A judge today dismissed an indictment charging Sen. Edward Gurney, R-Fla., a membe of the Senate Watergate committee, with an election-law violation concerning campaign contributions. Leon County Court Judge Charles McClure said the indictment was based on a section of the state election law that was unconstitutional and "null and Void."

The scnator was indicted by a county grand jury last month on a misdemeanor charge of acceoting campaign contributions without naming a campaign treasurer or setting up a campaign bank account.

Judge McClure said the Democratic politician, State Rep. Marshall Harris, who first accused Sen. Gurney of violating the statute, had been allowed to give legal advice to the grand jury in violation of Florida law. The judge said he considered the testimony of Mr. Harris "highly improper and prej-

Two Decades Later

Warren wrote for a unanimous Supreme Court in Brown vs. Board of Education: "We conclude that in the field of public education the doctrine of 'separate but equal' has no place." The nine justices agreed that to separate black children by order of the law "may affect their hearts and minds in a way unlikely to ever be undone."

May 17, 1954, marked more than the start of a laborious dismantling of the South's dual public education systems. The ruling signaled the end of Jim Crow, the segregationist doctrine sanctioned by the disastrous Supreme Court decision in Plessy vs. Fergusson in 1896. Ignoring Justice John Marshall Harlan's prophetic dissenting view that "our Constitution is color-blind, and neither knows nor tolerates classes among citizens," the Supreme Court had codified post-Reconstruction racism by giving the "separate but equal" doctrine the status of substitute for "equal protections."

Unrelated to education, Plessy had upheld segregated seating on public streetcars. Yet. for almost 60 years that judicial abomination provided the constitutional basis for the South's apartheid. It was a doctrine that infected the nation far beyond Jim Crow's official borders.

In catching up with Justice Harlan's dissent, the Warren court restored the Constitution's integrity. Despite much resistance, Brown set in motion an irreversible social revolution. The debate over the decision's impact too often is confined to statistics of school desegregation .

Within a year of Brown, Rosa Parks, a tired seamstress in Montgomery, Ala., was, like Homer Plessy 60 years earlier, arrested for her refusal to move to the back of a bus. A little known minister named Martin Luther King jr. brought the public company to its knees by keeping blacks off its buses for more than a year.

In Little Rock, President Eisenhower ordered troops to escort children to school past Twenty years ago, Chief Justice Earl a human wall of segregationists. Black students in North Carolina occupied segregated lunch counters in nonviolent protest until the illegal barriers fell.

Blacks and whites marched and fought together, daring the guns, dogs and obscenities of white sheriffs. An army of aroused Americans marched to Washington to pledge support for Dr. King's dream of equality.

Great universities dropped their restrictive color bars.

Finally, in 1964 and 1965, prodded by President Johnson to his eternal credit, Congress enacted the civil rights and voting rights laws that dramatically changed the roles of blacks in employment, the electoral process and the political power structure.

The 30-year march was slowed by serious setbacks-the murder of Dr. King, the explosions of the urban ghettes, the tactics of white segregationists and black separatists. President Nixon has persisted in trying to negate the Constitution with divisive antibusing appeals and proposals, the latest of which was narrowly defeated by the Senate this very week.

The wounds of racial hatred have not yet healed. Old suspicions and new economic fears still divide races and classes. And yet, the nation is moving irrevocably toward its integrated goal under a Constitution that is in fact color-blind. The dual school systems are no more. Black mayors have been elected in great cities, including the South. The public schools in two of the most populous states—California and Michigan—are headed by black educators. Among the justices of the Supreme Court is Thurgood Marshall, the lawyer who argued the case for the reversal of Plessy before the Warren court.

The anniversary of segregation's historic defeat calls not for self-congratulatory paeans but for a pledge to build on the foundation of considerable but insufficient gains, with renewed faith and with more than deliberate speed

Attermath

More death, more tragedy, more terror for the peoples of the Middle East. The murder of 21 Israeli schoolchildren is almost beyond comprehension in its horror-and in its abysmal viciousness. No purpose has been served, nothing has been achieved except the death of innocents and the clouding over of the most promising prospect for next month-even without the tragedles of eful disengagement that the troubled area has known for many years past.

No matter how great the provocation it is still hard to see how the government of Israel could believe that its raids in southern Lebanon on Thursday and Friday brought any closer the goal to which Israel has so long aspired. These retaliatory raids, however understandable in fury and frustration, will make more difficult than ever the already difficult mediation mission of Secretary of State Kissinger, at a moment when it was apparently tantalizingly close to success. There will be no way now of knowing whether the compromise formula needed to disengage Syrian and Israeli troops on the Golan Heights could have been achieved this week, at the conclusion of Mr. Kissinger's current shuttle mission. Instead, artillery exchanges and aerial combat have intensified in the Golan area.

Though the two governments were said to have moved remarkably close in their terms, the differences remaining might have been sufficient to require a few more weeks' consideration and another visit by Mr. Kissinger the last two days. Now with nazslone so inflamed-precisely the inhuman design of the Palestinian terrorists-a cooling-off period may be the only way to rescue the progress already made.

The underlying point remains valid: Both Syria and Israel saw their respective national interests well served by reaching a settlement. That was true before the Maslot attack, and it remains true today. If criminal terrorism and forceful vengeance are not to be allowed to reign supreme in the Middle East, with ultimately catastrophic results, that perception of enlightened national interest must be restored intact when the grief and anger of this tragic moment have been

Portuguese Developments

The Soares-Pereira meeting in Dakar is an event of great importance. If things continue at this rate, Africa will soon be richer by three nations, independent in a relatively short span. This process will obviously bring fears of a violent reaction on the part of Europeans living in the Portuguese "provinces."

The military chiefs who took power from the Caetano regime show that they will not be stopped by questions of protocol. After letting his foreign minister set foot in an African capital [Daker] that openly supported the independence groups. Gen. de Spinola has said that he guaranteed to all independence leaders freedom of movement on Portuguese soil.

-From Le Monde (Paris).

Alongside the colonial problem, the toughest job the new Portuguese government has to tackle is the economy, and especially the inflation and social angles. This is a field where the decision to leave the right wing out in the cold could rebound, for it is the right that controls Portugal's economy. The government will be well-advised to avoid confrontation on the basic question of whether the new system is to be socialized or private-based, and to concentrate for the next year on establishing and consolidating political democracy. But the disturbing question remains, whether the right will not force a showdown to assert its power. -From the Nene Zürcher Zeitung Zurich).

Children have been killed in the past in Arab and Israeli military operations of various kinds. But the attempt to artain political ends by threatening to kill children in cold blood marks a new step in the escalation of terror in the Middle East. TASHINGTON. - The President's cabinet has been put in an awkward position by the impeachment inquiry in the Congress, and it is clear from their public statements that they have been neglected by the White House and that they have not yet sorted out their loyalties.

For example, Claude Brinegar, the President's transportation secretary, told the National Press Club here the other day that he "shocked, offended and discouraged," by the Watergate "mess," but didn't want the President to resign.

On the same day, Secretary of Commerce Frederick Dent told an audience in Greensboro, N.C., that scripts showed that the President was not guilty of any criminal act, but he added that the President's political enemies were leading the impeachment drive and that the media had tried to obscure "these facts and dwell on this subject with a vindictiveness and glee that distort a fair evaluation of the broader issues of the day."

Doing Their Jobs

Meanwhile, senior members of the cabinet like Henry Kissinger at State and James Schlesinger at Defense, though they are constantly invited to pass judgment on the transcripts have uried to stay out of the public controversy and concentrated on doing their jobs, and this seems to be the sensible thing to do during the impeachment process.

The main thing for the moment is that the executive branch of the government should keep going at maximum efficiency, while the President is preoccupied with his own defense. He has set the direction of policy, but it is carried out by the cabinet and the civil service, and the more he is diverted by the impeachment charges against him, the more he has to rely on the cabinet and the bureaucracy to keep the engine of government going.

According, diverting the cabinst members from their main work into speeches like Dent's, proclaiming the President's innocence, or like Brinegar's, deploring the transcripts and the "nices," only add to the confu-

The cab net under the Amerlean presidential system, is not like a cabinet under the British or parliamentary system. Former Secretary of State Dean Rusk used to talk about the "corporate responsibility" of the cabinet in Washington, as if it had been voted into office, like Harold Wilson's cabinet, as a team, with shared responsibilities for the policies and conduct of the government, but that's not the way it is here.

Not Elected

Actually, there is no institutionalized cabinet in Washington. Maybe there should be, and if there had been, the Watergate scandal and the cover-up could not possibly have happened, but there isn't. Cablnet members here have no constituencies of their own. They were not elected as a governing body. He is assuming their loyalty to him, forgetting that, unlike Ehrlichman and Haldeman, they may be driven in the crisis to consider a higher loyalty to the

Computers in Sweden

Checking Big Brothe

By Tom Wicker

STOCKHOLM-If Richard year promptly received con Nixon lived in Sweden, the truth about his tax deductions and payments would have been known as soon as he filed his return. By tradition and law, just about every public document here is open to anyone who wants to see it, whether it concerns him or not. That is one reason why the Swedish government is pushing ahead with a unique plan to control computer data banks.

The tapes, discs and other exotic equipment by which data can be stored in computers are now considered "documents" by Swedish courts. Computers, moreover, are as common as aquavit and almost as powerful, in this country of skilled technology and vast social programs; imagine what a godsend the computer revolution must have been to the health service agency that has to keep records on sick pay and other benefits for virtually every one of the 8.1 million Swedes. And since aggressive Swedish businessmen can get these "documents" from the government just for the asking, private computer registers have proliferated, too.

Sweden and the computer were made for each other in another way—the personal number that every Swede acquires at birth and which theresiter identifies him on everything from signed dinner tabs to his most important transactions. These numbers make it a simple matter to cross-reference any number of computer registers and compile a mass of detail on any Swede-in fact, on practically all Swedes.

Uproar Created

Nobody seemed to be paying much attention until 1970—the year the national census was fully computerized and the government announced that the taped records would be sold to anyone who wanted to buy. That created something of an uproar, just as proposals were being made in parliament for the Big Brother of them all—a single national computer register to compile and keep updated all available data on every citizen. Parliament finally backed away from that one although the computers were on order-and created, instead, a commission to look into the matter of personal registers and the threat to privacy.

The situation was already desperate. The mother of a newborn baby would find herself receiving, two or three days after the birth, a computer letter hailing the happy event and touting a brand of baby food. From the baby's personal number, the advertiser even knew whether a boy or a girl had been born. Similarly, lucky or shrewd taxpayers who got big refunds in a given DARIS -Coincidental with recent rumors of Chou En-lai's gradual decline either in health or in the Chinese power scene are reports that Peking, while in no sense reducing its fears of possible Soviet military intentions, has begun to suggest a different appreciation of Moscow's strategy.

For five years China has been alarmed by the fact that Russia was building up its armed strength along the Sino-Soviet border, possibly with the intention of invading its huge neighbor. Ever since 1969, Peking has rarned the West to be on the alert against such a danger to the existing global balance

The burden of Chinese suggest tions has been that the United States and its NATO allies should not allow detente to obscure the possibility that Moscow was using this dream to camouflage a plan for sudden assault on China.

West Warned

Such thoughts have often been voiced by Chou and other Chinese in conversations with foreigners. But this spring another idea seems to fascinate Peking The West is now being warned that it might itself prove to be the main target of Soviet aggressiveness and that China might be just a blind. Li Hsien-nien, a Polithuro

What, if anything, a shift in Peking's analysis may have to do with Chou's position is impossible to say. Official indications so far aver only that the 76-year-old Chou is tiring and therefore cutting down protocol activities, not that he is fading from the power scene. There are few ways of getting hard evidence on such political shifts and there are differences in the analyses of China-watching diplomats in Hong Kong and those in Peking itself.

A Tough-Minded, Definitive View of Shaw's 'Pygmalion'

By John Walker

LONDON, May 17 (IHT).— Albery Theater, aided by some remarkably unsentimental acting suddenly long ago, when "My Fair Lady" seemed the definitive version of George Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion," turning his phonetic variation on the Cinderella theme—from dropped aspirates to high aspirations-into a shimmering high romantic comedy, a love story where the passion was purely verbal.

But no more. Not after John Dexter's superbly tough-minded treatment of the play at the peace of mind.

It is easy to see now that the musical subtly subverted the intentions of the play, substituting a cozy elegance for Shaw's more stinging wit and derisive powers. Here is an Eliza who does not merely change from Cockney flower girl to apparent aristocrat but who goes on growing and learning throughout the play. Until, at the end-with an abruptness that will shock those who remember with enjoyment the musical or even earlier productions of the play-Eliza has the strength of mind and independence to entirely reject her teacher. Her reaction to Higgins's

And much more than with Ibsen's heroine, you know that Eliza will survive and prosper. Miss Rigg's last-act duel with Mr. McCowen is a dazzling moment of intellectual comedy, a battle of sharp wits that is also charged with erotic feelings.

Mr. McCowen, bearded and locking as Shavian as someone of his lack of inches can, is admirable in conveying Higgins's dry Passion, his intellectual development that has far outstripped his emotional responses. There is excellent comedy in the differences of his behavior, at home, in his laboratory (Jocelyn Herbert and Andrew Sanders's set is a brilliant cross between a gentlemen's club and a mad scientist's fantasies), and ill-at-ease in his mother's civilized drawing room where he can hardly move without wrecking the room or upsetting polite con-

Funniest Scene

The funniest scene remains, as always, Eliza's first foray into society, precisely enunciating her normal Cockney slang with devastating effect. It is hilariously done, with Miss Rigg maintaining perfect poise as her statements grow ever more ludicrous and her voice takes on a baritone trill. She manages the early scenes well—she is "deliciously low" as Higgins says-even if her accent lacks authenticity. But she is her best in the succession of transformations, the ever-deepening sense of an individual becoming aware of her performances, notably Mr. Hos-kins's admirable Doolittle. The evening is a joy. The production is, at least for our time, the

Major Show of Miro Works Opening at Paris Museum

By Michael Gibson

PARIE, May 17 (IET).—Joan Miro, now 80 years old, is being Paris, May 17 (1817).—Joan Miro, now 20 years old, is same honored by a retrospective exhibition of his work at the Grand Palais (which opens to the public tomorrow, remaining on view to Oct. 13). About half of the show, to be exact, is retrospective, the other half heing the artist's most recent production—a novelty introduced at the request of Miro himself who does not so much enjoy the idea of being viewed as an imposing figure of the past. Over 350 works are displayed. Miro has been painting and shaping objects for some 60 years now. The first 40 years, schematically speaking, were devoted to the elaboration of a form, and the past 20 to the forgetting of that form. The elaboration took its departure from the sharply defined and already very personal style that Miro used when he was 25, passed through the cru-cible of surrealism and emerged, beyond surrealism, in the peculiar blend of simple colors and calligraphic figures that is easily identifiable and that no one would venture to imitate.

There is a playful use of form and color in his more or less surrealist period—a manifest irony that distinguishes Miró from his more lyrical contemporaries. At that stage a certain volume is still apparent, and a sort of space still exists. Around 1933, both disappear, but his figures are still painted forms. Then stadually, through the late thirties and early forties, they start evolving until they are no longer the representation of a figure but its calligraphic symbolization. At the same time Miró seems to be striving to free himself from even this form of allusion in order to give all his attention to the line itself, with no reference to anything be-

Underlying his Cro-Magnon stenography, one sometimes per-ceives a struggle with the artist's own nature, a struggle aimed at attaining a degree of disinvolvement with the work that in turn permits him to achieve, without apparent control, the sort of rightness he desired but would not have attained had he actually tried to. Not many of his paintings accomplish this, but when they do (as in the large blue paintings) there is an obvious simplicity that makes one forget the energy and self-discipline that went into them.

Miró is never pretentious, but the freedom of his heart and mind and hand do not so much appear in his painting as they do in his sculptures, his ceramics and his "sobreteixim" (rough jute and flux tapestries). These works, the best of which were cone in the past 25 years and the finest of all in the last two years, are sweet monuments of creative impertinence. They are con-structed, quite often, of bits of trash, infused with ironic individuality and in some cases, cast in immortal bronze. Every one of them breathes vitality and a certain saucy good humor and blows a brisk gust of fresh air into the chambers of the mind. No doubt their effectiveness is enhanced by the long artistic career of the man who created them, but both their wit and their aesthetic quality are evident outside any historical frame of

The astonishing fact is that Miro, at 80, has reached the high point of his creative and inventive powers. He succeeds in renewing himself in a way that makes his statements relevant to the day. His provocation is active and constructive and his most inexplicable fantasies have a rightness about them—like atfixing umbrellas and odd bits of rags to his jute and flax "sobreteixim"—the sort of rightness that we all knew when we were children. It is with this playful authority of imagina-tion that Miró, within a definite aesthetic framework, breaks down the barriers on which one has timidiy written "Oh, one can't do that!" by simply doing fust that and responding: "Why not?" Consequently I find the Miró of the past much less alive, interesting, relevant to our day than the Miro of the present I am much keener on his three-dimensional works than on his paintings even those of today. for in the paintings he finds less opportunity to express the kind of inventive freedom that is his most attractive and enduring quality. By sheer quantity the exhibition is dominated by his paintings, but its greatest vitality is in the smaller number, of works made of clay, jute, wood, rags, old chairs and bronze.

The Possessing and the Possessed

EW YORK-Of art collectors, "Fisherman's Last Supper." There entirely contemporary American, somebody once wrote, there were hundreds, in time thousands while is will be a supper." those who possess and those p are possessed. It is the possed who interest me, and none te than Roy Neuberger and o eph Hirshhorn

They started buying art hey must be fairly close in ly in the 1930s. Their collecis are right now moving imo rly constructed museums beartheir names. A substantial t of the Neuberger collection already installed in a Philip nson-designed building opento the public this weekend on campus of the State Unisity, at Purchase N.Y. The shhorn collection the other day an moving out of his home Greenwich. Conn., for instalwhen it opens in October he aircady famous "doughnut" dung designed for it in Washon D.C., by Gordon Bunschaft.

ast Sunday I watched the oberger pieces being set into dsome red brick building. And n I drove to Greenwich for mall party Hirsbborn was givso old friends might see the ection for the last time in his was a strange wonderful moon in which warm mems of the past surring images the present, richly promising ons of the future, were all ed up for me.

ecause, in a curious seuse, all ause I was there when both Fectors "discovered" American and our tastes were virtually same. They changed in the ic way, as they and I watched sts pursue and develop new as. They always it should be i, did their own buying, withthe help of advisers and lers who these days so often lers who these days and later Bearld Instant Collections. my taste. Zishemius I loved. for instance, but those Two Inhundred. A half-dozen would have held me. Milton Avery was another man they pounced on;

I would have picked, not pounced. In time all of us came to Poilock, Rothko, De Kooning, Neuberger never did get to Olitski or Noland, no more than I have The examples of the abstract expressionists they finally "saw" and bought turn out to be splendid. But even here Neuberger's taste remained strictly in character. His Rothko, hung now in the museum, is an elegant, airy, intimate work, the kind which draws the viewer into it. in a one-to-one relationship, rather than the enormous variety which surround and overwhelm viewers in an environment.

What happened was that around 1960 both men realized that their collections had taken on a life of their own, apart from being their private possessions or the passion by which they were possessed. Eventually the works would be hung in museums, and therefore personal taste had to be stretched to encompass pieces important for their place in the development of American art even if the collectors had not responded to them immediately. Still, the Nenberger pictures -and sculpture, too-remained small enough in scale to be enjoyed in a home.

The Hirshhorn switch at this fime was different. Always especially responsive to sculpture, he turned now to monumental works that sat superbly on his expansive lawns and diveways at Greenwich, and must surely prove as impressive in the museum on the Washington Mall when it is

But now his collection was no longer "mine." At his house last Sunday I found it impossible to identify even in fantasy as the owner of Rodin's great bronze full-size standing figure of Balzac, or the group of figures called the "Burghers of Calais" a few feet from his front door, or the scores of major Henry Moore bronzes. Calder stabiles, late David Smiths superbly "planted" everywhere.

But there will be time to consider the Hirshhorn collection when that museum opens in Washington next fall. Right now the news is the already opened Neuberger Museum, in Purchase. Actually the Neuberger collection.

The Trouble With Twyla Tharp and Company

By Oleg Kerensky

ONDON. May 17 (IHT).-The American dancer Twyla Tharp has come a long way since her only previous London season about seven years ago. Then, in an obscure hall, her performance was more of a happening than a dance event. Now she has brought her company to the fashionable Roundhouse for a twoweek season, heralded by notices from New York which describe her as "the Nijinska of our time" and her dancing style as revolutionary and "baroque".

The two programs being shown here reveal two different styles. and I understand that this entire repertory is to be scrapped after the London season, presumably make way for yet another

Each program contains a work created in Boston in 1970 and performed in silence. "The Fu-gue" consists of Miss Tharp herself, in hot pants and calf-length boots, accompanied by Sara Rudner-and Rose Marie Wright in trousers and similar boots, stamuing aggressively around the stage. The floor is wired for sound, so that the stamps come echoing over the loudspeakers like a loud percussive accompaniment. The effect-unintentional I am sureis of guards from Ravensbruck concentration camp on a night out. At least it has the merit of brevity.

Second Program

"The One Hundreds," in the second program, seems unterminable. The first and longest section has Miss Tharp and Miss Wright doing a hundred—I did not count but can well believeshort gymnastic movements in unison, with Miss Tharp's according the more graceful and precise of the two. Eventually they are replaced by five other dancers doing similar movements for shorter time, and finally by a crowd of amateur volunteers rehearsed in advance, doing them for such an extremely short time that they have mercifully departed almost as soon as they have arrived. One must admire the way Miss Tharp and her company symbolize so many movements. presumably by counting to themselves, but there is not much pleasure in watching them. noticed that several members of the audience actually fell asleep. #### DANCE IN LONDON

Miss Tharp, and represented here by three works, is much more enjoyable, though it puzzled the audience in a different way. In "Eight Jelly Rolls" (1971) and "The Raggedy Dances" (1972). Miss Tharp simply choreographs to trad jazz-Jelly Roll Morton and the currently trendy Scott Joobn. In "The Raggedy Dances" she also achieves a suiprise contrast by inscring Mozart's piano variations on "An Vous Dirais-Je Maman," the tune which in English is known as "Baa Baa Black Sheep." same effect is used in "The Bix Pieces" (1972), where recordings of Bix Beiderbecke are followed by a live performance of the adagio from a Haydu string quartet and a recording of Thelonius Monk's arrangement of

"Abide With Mr." there is also a spoken commentary, which was unfortunately inaudible on the first night owing to microphone failure. Despite some pretentiousness-such as the repeated statement "I want to set a dance to the 'Goldberg' Variations' because it has already been done? and some undeveloped provocations such as "I used the Havdn because the tune was the German national anthem and we premiered the work in Paris 31 years after the German invasion -this commentary wa Samillar cuplanateer notes on the other works might have been an adventage

Miss Tharp intended "Tire Er-Pieces' to recall her youth so she included tap-dancing, batontwirling, and other routines she once learned. The opening batonis very funny. She also wanted to avoid the names being too obviously related to said, so side rehearsed there to Havon only setting them to Beiderbecke in time for the public performances

I for one am grateful that most of her repertons here is short and snappy with none of the barefoot posturing and writhing which are the hallmarks of so much avant-garde dancing. But an audience which came expecting something new and significant mostly felt it was getting something old and trite.

> Austria's action came at the end of a week of intense speculation that similar moves might be announced by several of the other countries involved in the joint European float. West Germany has denied repeatedly that it plans to revalue the mark.

Today, the Bundesbank disclosed that it had purchased 62.8 million Danish crowns, 43.6 million Swedish crowns and 6 million Norwegian crowns when these currencies threatened to fall out of the joint float. Dealers reported that the West German central bank may also have bought additional quantities of the Scandinavian currencies on the open market.

In Bonn the Finance Ministry said today that Sunday's meeting of finance ministers would be no more than a routine session, although foreign exchange dealers in London and other financial centers remained convinced that the central topic of discussion would inevitably be the recent developments in currency rela-million in temporary financing needed to meet short-term obliga-

For the past week Lyon has been trying to arrange with its creditors a grant of funds needed to meet short-term obligations, but a company statement said these talks failed, partly because of "conflict of interest with the various banks involved."

The company's latest proposal is that a new construction and development company be formed which "would be financed by the banks concerned for the purchase and completion" of projects that the group has begun or is committed to carry out.

A company spokesman said the idea of reconstructing the com-pany was the best alternative available. He said it had not been decided what role Ronald Lyon, chairman of the group, would have in the new company. Ronald Lyon at present has about a 90 percent interest in the privately-held group, which has sets reportedly totaling about £136 million

Lyon Group is one of several British property companies that have recently faced liquidity problems because of high interest rates and a slump in property values. There is a possibility that a default by Lyon Group on its loans could have serious repercussions among its creditors.

At a press conference, Mr. Lyon said his company had asked for help from the government but not received it. He said the group had approached the Bank of England two weeks ago before going to the Treasury.

"I understand that the Bank of England had a number of discussions privately with the Treasury on his matter," Mr. Lyon

"We asked for assistance in different forms, but they made it clear that for various reasons it was not possible to assist us."

U.K. Production Index Increases in March

LONDON, May 17 (AP-DJ),-The British seasonally-adjusted index of industrial production was 104.7 for March, up from 101.1 in February but down from 111.6 in March, 1973, the Central Statistical Office (CSO) estimated today. (The index has a base of 100 for 1970.)

The CSO said the increase in March over February reflected the end of a nationwide strike of coal miners in March and the removal of restrictions on the industrial use of electricity.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Chrysler Raises Prices Again

Chrysler Corp. is raising prices on cars and trinks an average $46. The increase is Chrysler's second in a month. The automaker says the increase includes a $37 average boost in the base price of its vehicles, effective June 1, and a $9 rise in shipping charges, beginning Monday. Spokesmen say the base vehicle increase is necessary to offset recent boosts in steel costs amounting to $35 a unit. On May 1, Chrysler raised its prices an average $122 to lead off the industry's third major round of price increases during the 1974-model year. Chrysler's latest increase in the base price of vehicles is its fifth since Scotember. Prices now have gone up an average $452 since the end of the 1973 model year. Spokesmen say the company contemplates no further price increases for the remainder of the model year, but add that the price of a 1975-model car will go up substantially to cover government mandated safety and emission

Conoco Sets North Sea Target

Continental Oil Co. (Conoco) is hoping to get 100,000 to 150,000 barrels a day of North Sea oil within the next six to 10 years. This would be the company's share of North Sea oil finds in which it has an interest. Reporting this, John Kircher, president of the company's Eastern Hemisphere petroleum division, also says that oil companies operating in the North Sea would require a profit of $2.50 to $3 a barrel to achieve a reasonable return on North Sea oil exploration and development. This is considerably higher than the $1 to $1.50-a-barrel profit cited by some newspaper commentators as a lety return on North Sea oil.

Boots' Bid for Fraser Rejected

The government has refused permission for the proposed takeover of the House of Frager, whose interests include Harrod's, the famous London department store, by Boots Pure Drug Co., Britain's largest retail pharmaceutical chain. The takeover was agreed by the two componies last November, but Boots later withdren its Cafer of $540 million for the House of Fraser after the government called for an investigation by the Monopolies Commission. Boots said that if the commission approved the merger, it would want to negotiate a lower price because economic chromstances had changed since the original inal offer. Shirley Williams, Prices and Consumer Protection Secretary, told the House of Commons the commission had decided that the takeover "might be expected to operate against the public interest." component.

NEW YORK, May 17 (AP-DJ). -Troubled Franklin National Bank has had to borrow about $750 million from the Federal Reserve System because of its difficulties in obtaining funds from normal channels.

agement shake-up and announced plans to raise $50 million through rights offerings of its stock, which would be guaranteed by Michele Sindona, the Italian financier who owns about 21 percent of Franklin. The latter move, in addition to supplying needed capital, was designed to help quell rumors about the bank's viability. Despite that, there was a growing belief among financial analysis that Franklin would be merged into another institution

Franklin reiterated yesterday that it has no merger negotlations under way, and a Fed official said he knows of no serious merger discussions.

Figures released by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York yesterday gave some indication of the dimensions of Franklin's borrowings at the Fed's "discount window." But the specific $750million figure given by reliable sources could not be determined from the Fed's statistics.

Those statistics showed that borrowings by all member banks of the New York Fed amounted to $1.74 billion Wednesday, up from $814 million the previous week. In the last 10 weeks borrowings have averaged about $435 million. There were reports that Franklin is running out of good collat-eral to back the Fed loans, but specialists generally dismissed the reports. The Fed said it stood by last Sunday's statement that Franklin had "a large amount of acceptable collateral available to support advances," and that the Fed would make loans available. Despite Franklin officials' denial of reports that the bank would soon be merged into another institution, one analyst stated: There's a growing feeling, with the pressure off Franklin because of the Fed's umbrello (lending aid), that there will be a deal of some kind." Most mentioned candidates

End-of-Week Slump in Stocks Sets Scene for 'Blue' Monday

HEW YORK, May 17 (Reuters). -New York Stock Exchange prices went into broad retreat today, once again falling back in the free of discouraging news and some disappointing corporate aumouncements.

The decline did not occur on our volume. There was a slight mercase on yesterday's transaction total of 12.09 million shares, but the 13.67 million shares that traded today did not constitute a big self-off.

"It just sort of dribbled down." one analyst commented, adding: "it just shows again how illiquid this market is. Everyone's staying out and no wonder.

Perhaps typical of this illiquidity was the decline in Research Coltrell on the Amex. The stock was halted in trading at a price of 16 1.2. After news of a sec-ond-quarter loss for the company. the stock opened at 6 1/8.

The Dow Jones industrial average sank 16.5 points to 818.84. About 1,220 issues declined, while only 230 gamed.

The stock market remains froubled by a variety of external factors, rising interest rates among them.

Venezuela Plans To Nationalize U.S. Oil Firms

CARACAS, May 17 (AP) .-Venezuela's President Carlos Andres Perez said yesterday the country will "immediately proceed" to nationalize the American-dominated oll industry.

Mr. Perez made the announcement over nationwide television after appointing a 36-member commission to prepare a takeover plan within six months.

The move would affect Exxon, Shell, Mobil, Gulf, Sun Oil, Texaco and the many other foreign oil companies that produce about 95 percent of Venezuela's 3.1-millionbarrel average daily output. The companies have 40-year concessions that would have begun running out in 1983.

The President gave no timetable for nationalization, but said it will become a reality "as soon as possible." He repeated earlier pleages of "just compensation" for the private oil companies and forced takeover if the compensation is rejected.

niel Boorstin, they are nearly always disillusioned. In human unfortunately, climaxes beings, are usually followed by anticlimaxes. Imprisonment in the present, the author adds, a prison stripped of the comforts of perspective, leads to a morbid self-preoccupation. Americans are cultural hypochondriacs, forever brooding over what ails them as if this were "the proper study of mankind." The belly-aching is based on material success, Like the character in a recent U.S. television commercial. Americans have "caten the whole thing." every idea, object, gimmick or gadget that infinity-oriented technology can contrive. Americans are, at once, the table and the toilet of their insatiable appetites. Illusion is the currency of U.S.

culture, disillusion is its inflation. The past that might have comforted Americans, perhaps even made them proud, is a victim-like everything else-of planned obsolescence. For many, it is a betrayal of progress, a nangover following the wate of a deceased relation. The momentum of wheels within wheels dumps Americans into the present, where they stare about themselves like anumals brought to a 300. Why am I here? What was I seeking? Like an amnesiae, Americans ask themselves these questions because there is no one else to speak to.

"Democracy and Its Discontents" is a distillation, a steam rising from Boorstin's many books on America. It is like the most vivid reflection of a long. intensive trip. Though not all of it is new, the familiar parts function as premises for tresh hypotheses. In speaking of "communication" on television, for example, the author observes that to catch and hold attention, images must be in motion and tend therefore to be explosure or disruptive. We come to identify communication with dissent, with the violent and melodramatic.

In the same connection, Boorattn corrects the popular misuse of the word "relevant," whose original Latin meaning was to lift above the current and connect with distant or larger issues. Today's i relevant it is merely topical, a rapidly fading nevelty of "newsworthiness" that is blind to its own historical significance, Deluged by random informationthe hors d'œuvre of knowledgewe are seldom able to form a coherent and meaningfu! picture of what is actually happening.

Unlike the politician, Boorstin can treat public opinion with the objectivity it so often lacks, It is, he says, miscellaneous, discrete, unsystematic, normative, fluctuating and not cumulative. In other words, you would do better not to believe it to resist its insidious tyranni, "We must aganden he says, the prevalent belief in the Times book critic.

BECAUSE Americans insist on superior wisdom of the ignorant."

ties. Though the author is not the first to call advertising the "rhetoric of democracy." this is only a preliminary to accusing democratic society of being more concerned with credibility than

Americans have "wandered, out of history." as he puts it. Forgetting that America was built on a breaking down of class and economic barriers, Americans now "celebrate" certain barriersnotably blackness-as "insuperable" and behave as if this sitnation can only be compensated for rather than corrected.

The American "failure of nerve" as Partisan Review called it some years ago-has led people to try to neutralize the sense of risk that once gave zest to their lives. We are insured against everything, even ourselves. All bets are hedged; each of us has a secret safety deposit box where souls are stored. Second cousins to Yves Tinguely's self-destroying sculptures. American ideals evaporate in the act of achievement. Like loveless lovers, we experience our pleasure and our disappointment simultaneously. The Democratization of emperience-making everything available to everyone —is a travesty of the immemorial dream of uniqueness. Our neighbor is an "instant replay" of ourselves.

As Americans trade in their cars each year, so they trade in themselves, a prey to the same fashions, Poignancy is shouldered out by a passion for solution, based on an incorrect inference from technology. Congregation, the source of community feeling, is not only supplanted by television, newspapers and magazinesit is now considered vulgar, on a par with "extraordinary popular delusions and the madness of crowds." For the mystery of life. Americans have substituted the confusions of misunderstanding.

With all this, Boorstin is no pessimist. As he says: "The early New England Puritans could not be distilusioned, for the simple reason that they never suffered from illusions. In this volume it is not my purpose to dispraise American democracy—one of man's most amazing and surprising achievements on this earthbut rather to help prevent us from being disillusioned. That we can accomplish only if we make an honest, ruthless effort to see the price tag that history has placed on our civilization."

The game lasted about 8 1/2 hours and dragged on with assorted fights, arguments and repairs to the nets.

Big Talk

Boston had come to win ("We had a big talk before the game," said Gilles Gilbert, the Bruins' goatie, "All the guys came."), knowing that there was no tomorrow in the event of a loss. For a while, however, Boston's blistering attack (19 shots in the first period to 8 for Philadelphia) gained only one goal as Bernie Parent played superbly in the Fiyer net.

With the score tied, 1-1, Boston's supershooter, Bobby Orr, took matters into his own hands. Twice finding himself open with the puck in the center of the Flyer zone, he drilled the puck at Parent and scored twice.

"I was screened," Parent said later. "It's hard enough to stop Bobby when I can see him. The secret was we weren't aggressive enough to stop him from getting

Gilbert had it fairly easy in the Bruins' goal as the Boston forwards popped away at the Fiver goal for most of the game, Gregg Sheppard scored his 11th playoff goal in the first period as he and Orr combined on a breakaway while Boston was shorthanded

Philadelphia tied it in the second period when Billy Clement scored his first playoff goal, after finding Bill Flett, his teammate, Gilbert and the puck all in the crease at the same time. His shot counted because the referee ruled the puck had been

"extension of the act to programs within a university which receive no federal funds, and the apparently unwarranted requirement for competitive athletics alone on the campus of the provision of 'equal opportunity,' which several detailed sections of the regulations elaborate into virtual equal expenditures."

On the other hand, Gwen Greg-ory, a 38-year-old lawyer in HEW's Office of Civil Rights. says, "The regulations will call for equal opportunity but that desart mean equal expenditures as the NCAA would have everyone

Women have to have the me opportunity," she says. There has to be a doctrine of fairness. What we're saying is that if a school has a men's and a women's swimming team, that 3 p.m. every day and the women get to use it at 6 a.m.

Bob James, Atlantic Coast Conference commissioner and chairman of the NCAA legislative committee, says: "We have been told only equal opportunity is required, not equal dollars. Yet, scholarships must be awarded on a 50-50 basis according to HEW spokesmen with whom we have met personally.

"And the regulations themselves include a long list of items which must be equal, including training, coaching, numbers of separate teams (if separate teams are established), equipment, supplies, scheduling of games and practices, travel and per diem, locker room; practice and competitive facilities, medical training facilities, and publicity. "It is naive to believe this is a requirement for less than equal dollars for men and women." James said. "What else is there left to be unequal?"

Entering the debate recently is the Project on the Status and Equcation of Women, Association of American Colleges, which issued a 21-page report on "What constitutes equality for women in sport? Federal law puts women in the running." The project concludes that collegiste athletics have thus far kept the status quo by perpetuating what it calls "sex stereotypes and myths."

The Victorian image of women as physically weak led most early educators to downplay physical activity for women," the paper says. "It was the women's colleges-Vassar, Wellesley, Goucher which first encouraged women to engage in vigorous exercise, apparently on the theory that women could do their best mental work only if it were balanced by physical activity."

Flyers Complained

The Flyers complained bitterly about Newell's refereeing after the game, saying that all the penalties had tired them and that he had lost control of the game.

In the third period, the Flyers concentrated on trying to intimidate Boston for the next game, while the Bruins went on scoring goals. Ken Hodge tailled on a power play at 39 seconds of the third period, and Don Marcotte added more insurance a minute from the end.

The coaches differed on the value of Sunday's sixth game in Philadelphia. "The pressure's on them now," said Bep Guidolin of Boston, "Our back was against the wall; now their back's against the wall; now their back's against the wall. We're due to win in Philly, and if we do, it's all thought the pressure was still on Boston. "If they lose, it's all over," he said. "We can still lose one more and win the cup. It's simple logic." Guidolin also had kind words

Cannonade's Trainer Elated About Post No. 6

BALTIMORE, May 17 (NYT). -When Larry Abbundi drew post position No. 6 for Cannonade yesterday, there was a general expression of satisfaction among the onlookers crowded into the racing secretary's office. But no one was more satisfied than Woody Stephens, the 60-year-old trainer who directs the activities

The colt is the strong choice to take the 1 3 16-mile Preskness m its 99th running tomorrow. Angel Cordero jr. will ride.

"I couldn't have picked a better position for my horse if they let me pick it out myself," he said. "Cannonade likes this track, he likes the distance, and he won't mind the size of the field."

The Preakness, the middle jewel of the Triple Crown for 3-year-olds, attracted 13 entrants when Abbundi made the draw, accompanied by his assistant, Eddie Litzenberger, and this year's Miss Preakness, Phyllis Stohl. If all start, the Preskness will have a gross value of $209,000 and a first prize of $156,500, both records for the

Besides the Preakness, the Triple Crown series is composed of the Kentucky Derby, run two ago, and the Belmont weeks to be contested on June 8. Cannonade's post position and the general reaction to it was based on the fact that the colt, Deer Dick. All of us at good old U.S.A., Inc., were saddened to hear that you were resigning. There is no doubt that you are going to leave a big hole in the government which even someone like Gerry Ford can't fill. But we understand your reasons for wanting to go. As you put it so succinctly in your letter, you would like to find something more challenging than just being President of the United States. Although we hate to lose you, we can't stand in your way of climbing up the ladder to success.

We're going to miss your beaming smile, your warm sympathy for voir fellow workers and your earthy language. I don't know anyone who called a spade a spade the way you did. We're also going to miss the

Greeks Discover Attica Theater ATHENS, May 16 (UPI).-

Archaeologists have discovered the first municipal theater of Attics near Athens airport. The stage, standing meters high, a small rectangular orchestra and one row of marble seats, presumably used by municipal officials, have been unearthed. Excavators also found two 4thcentury statues of the god Dionysos in the front part of the stage. Pieces of plaster found on the seats indicate that the theater might have been roofed.

WASHINGTON.—A man in prayer breakfasts, the great state dinners, the trips to China and Moscow and San Clemente, not to mention those fun sessions in the Oval Office when you let down your hair and regaled us with stories about The Washington Post, The New York Times, the television networks and Chuck Colson.

> I want you to know, Dick, that thanks to you, the good old U.S.A. has never been in better shape. Our stock is at an all-time high, and although we've had to pass up a dividend this year, no one blames you. You didn't know about the oil crisis and you certainly couldn't guess the rate of inflation, and surely it isn't your fault that the dollar is in trouble abroad. I don't think anyone could have foreseen the events. and I believe it was very unfair that a few disgruntled stockholders called for your resigna-

> We also admirer you for the way you handled your personal tax problems and real-estate deals. The feeling here at U.S.A. is that you did the right thing in taking the deductions, and they still haven't been able to prove that any of your real-estate investments weren't on the un and up. I know they keep harping about the milk thing and the payments Howard Hughes made to your friends, but this is just jealousy on the part of people who wanted your job. You were smart to ignore them.

> The gang would also like to thank you for hanging tough over the subpoena from Congress for your records. Heaven knows where U.S.A. would be today if they ever got hold of them.

As a small token of apprecia-

It's a brand-new Sony recording machine, self-activating, which we're sure will give you lots of pleasure. You could dictate your memoirs, or use it to record conversations with your friends. Choosing a restaurant is becoming a matter of conviction-ethnic, spiritual or feminist.

The Food's Bad But the Ideology Is Strong

O'NE doesn't est very well in New York any more, a situation New Yorkers have adapted to by going to restaurants for reasons that have nothing to do with

First came the ethnic boom, which provided an exotic ambience and the added benefit that, since the food is foreign, the eater need not decide whether or not it is good. Ethnic restaurants reached their peak with Moshe Peking, which is both kosher and Chinese.

These days the reasons for choosing restaurants seem more abstract. One can go to a place for strictly time-space reasons, as the burgeoning Fast Foods spots testify, or for spiritual reasons—the Sufi movement has taken over Miss Douglas's Bake Shop in the Village, which is now called Ananda East, and last fall the old ethnic National Delicatessen reopened as the Alive Restaurant, run by disciples of the well-fed little guru, Maharaj Ji. The restaurant, described at its opening as "something like a Salvation Army Soup Kitchen on Neptune," features Bliss Blends, Sweet 'n' Sour Bliss Balls and Humble Peace Pie.

One can also choose a restaurant for ideological reasons by going to Mother Courage, where food takes second place to feminism. In fact, when the restaurant opened two years ago, the cook was coowner Jill Ward, who does not know how to cook. It didn't matter: "The food was bad," she says, "but people would still come in five nights a week to support us."

Mother Courage now has a cook and a menu that the Village Voice thinks suffers from a superabundance of spinsch, although it includes chicken pie, brownies and redundant shrimp-scampi, Still, says Jill Ward, she wants Mother Courage to be known as a feminist restaurant, not as a restaurant on West 11th where you can get Chicken Kiev for $4.95: "When you walk in the atmosphere is different," she says. "It's not a question of wanting to be a feminist restaurant, it is one." Patrons (the restaurant is only open nights) are mostly women. "When guys come here they know it's a women's place, they don't hassle the customers, they act like human beings." Men must mind their Ps and Qs or, rather, learn new ones. For example, the waitress does not give the man the first taste of wine.

"We used to have just women taste the wine, but now we let men taste it too, for equality. One man said to the woman he was with, Then you can have a taste of the check, too.' She said, O.K. "If a guy orders for a woman, the waitress ignores him and asks her, What would you like? It's an education for them, consciousness-raising."

The waitress puts the check in the middle of the table and does not serve women first. "She serves whoever's closest, or whichever plate is hotter and she wants to get rid of it first.

"We have one john and everybody uses it, And no graffiti. That's a first in New York too. People feel relaxed here." Mother Courage, which used to be Benny's Soda Luncheonette and Delicatessen, is the first feminist restaurant. Funds to open it were obtained entirely within the feminist community and owners Jill Ward and Dolores Alexander were offered twice what they needed to open. The employees are all women, the pay is good, and there will be profit-sharing as soon as there are

"We're in it to make a living, not a killing," says Jill Ward, who was a manage-ment consultant until she realized she didn't want to work 40 hours a week for another 30 years and wanted feminist-oriented work, "to connect my funer reality with my daily activity."

She thinks of her restaurant as partly salon. "There are a lot of restaurants in this area. If we had been a normal restaurant, we wouldn't have made it.

"We're not a restaurant, we're a referral service, a check cashing service. We'll cash anyone's check once, none have bounced yet. People come in and ask for jobs, apartments, who's a good feminist lawyer or gynecologist or plumber. There's usually someone—there are even feminist automobile mechanics and architects."

Jill Ward is also working on plans for 400-unit feminist housing project. "For several years a lot of energy was going into demonstrations and marches," she says. "Now women are doing things that support the work of women." Not all feminist groups, however, are supportive of feminist restaurants, arguing that women should get out from in front of the stove and become doctors, lawyers, Indian chiefs. The success of Mother Courage has inspired feminist restaurants in other cities and a man is rumored to be thinking of a feminist restaurant chain. Just around the corner from Mother Courage is a kid sister restaurant, La Fronde, which is named after a French feminist newspaper and which opened only a few months ago.

Although its decor, too, is largely exposed brick La Fronde seems less militant than Mother Courage (perhaps because it lacks the poster Mother Courage has in its window advertising Martial Arts for Women Taught By Women). Like Mother Courage, La Fronce has been patronized by "Kate Millett and all those women who wrote books," in the words of its owner, Wania, but its clientele is mostly male.

"We get a lot of gay men, thank God." says Wania, who prefers to be known by her first name rather than her father's or ex-husband's name. "Women don't have the money to spend in restaurants."

Wania was a member of the Redstockings, the radical feminist group. La Fronde, however, seems less a feminist center than a restaurant that happens to be run by women.

"I don't know how far one can carry feminism," says Charlotte, the waitress. "I like it here because I like to work for women exclusively. I was working with men and women before. I think women work better and work together better." Charlotte, who is from London, used to work for the Foreign Office as a trans-"I'd rather work with pots and pans," she says.

Wania an energetic Swede who wears a Liberté Egalité Sororité T-shirt, used to work in McCall's food department: "I said to my old man if I don't make it with this restaurant, I'll have to go back to Park Avenue. He sald, 'What's wrong with that?' Everything!"

By the day La Fronde opened, Wania had only $4.68 left in the bank. Like Mother Courage, her restaurant was founded for ideological, not culinary, reasons: "Certainly it was," says Wania, "I was fascinated to work with women. Before that, at McCalls, I'd worked with girls. That's what they called us, and that's what dence, R.I., was indignant. The Providence Journal Bulletin ran a story saying that he had been arrested "on the spot" during a burglary at a drug store-Evans is now in jail. In a letter to the paper, the burglar charged that the story was "an alfront to my professionalism and skill, I was picked up an hour later and a mile away. The drug store is next to the North Providence police station, so technically I should have been caught on the spot. I was not caught on the spot, nor have I ever been." The paper printed a front page correction: "The indigna-tion caused by a slur on one's professional skills is understandable," said the editors, "So in the interest of justice, let the record show that Evans was, in truth, not 'caught on the spot.'"

'Affronting the Skill' PEOPLE: Of a Convicted Burglar

The 24-year-old daughter of Pennsylvania Gov. Milton Shapp made her debut as a belly dancer the other day at a restaurant outside Philadelphia. Joanne Shapp, a dance student who eventually hopes to become a family counselor, says, "I think it's a fun thing, but they (her parents) don't want me to make a fulltime career of it." Her theatrical name is Yasmin.

Arthur Fiedler, conductor of the Boston Pops since 1930, received the 11th Rodgers and Hammerstein award for outstanding contributions to Boston-area theater Thursday night. Fiedler, 79, got the $1,000 prize and a bronze medallion during a pop concert intermission.

Chicago mayor Richard Daley, who turned 72 this week, has been told that he can leave Presbyterian-St, Luke's Hospital within a week to rest before undergoing surgery. Daley went into the hospital May 6 after a mild stroke, Surgeons plan to unblock an artery in his neck.
